

THE MOTHERFUCKING KOALA

BREAKING: MEDIOCRE NEWSPAPER BELOVED BY MILLIONS IS GOING COMPLETELY BANKRUPT! OH NO! CRITICS RIGHT ALL ALONG!

Beloved Readers,

We at the Koala Big Time Funny Newspaper® headquarters write this message to you in a time of absolute crisis. It would seem that in our arrogance and a blind drunken stupor, we made some terrible financial investments and now all of our accounts are fully overdrawn.

The good news: At least we are the proud owners of all the pokemon cards from 2008, a half pound of weed, a sack of dead wasps, a Remington Model 1875 revolver, and 5K in scratch-off lotto tickets. The bad news: The Koala Pension Fund® is completely and utterly drained! Now with no way to purchase cheap booze and Cane's chicken, our poor staff is left with nothing to do but STARVE!

Oh the haters were right all along! They must possess some sort of supernatural clairvoyance, seeing our downfall from miles away with their impeccable powers of prediction. Clearly, their unwavering commitment to negativity and skepticism has paid off in the most spectacular fashion! Why with all of that fucking talent that they have, they should be writing the Koala instead of us! At least now they can rest easy knowing that they can point and laugh at us as we close down shop and pack up our shit forever.

So, let's raise our glasses to these brilliant soothsayers of doom, for they were right all along, and we were just too blinded by ego to see it. Bravo, haters, bravo!

Yours truly for the very last time ever ever and certainly never again,

A penniless Guava Goose

For everyone else: Koalaween is coming up on October 28th. We let everyone in that we can for a small donation to help keep The SDSU Koala® running, and we won't turn you away like the frats. Come and have some fun!

Bathroom Review

Rating Every Bathroom I Have Blown My Nose In

Eaterout

Fine, I'll confess: I've been blowing my nose in a LOT of SDSU bathrooms recently. I've been congested for basically the entire month of September, which means I've been lurking and gremlining in a lot of stalls across campus.

Yet, as we all know, not all bathrooms are created equal. Here at the Koala, we've become seasoned in letting you all know where the best places to piss, shit, and have sex are, but we've gotten dozens of requests: Where is the best place to blow my nose?

Well, look no further, sickos; here's a (kinda) comprehensive list:

First Floor of Arts and Letters, Outdoors:

This is the one I visit the most, mainly out of convenience sake. The acoustics are really good in this bathroom— maybe even TOO good— and I like how populated it is. I get really embarrassed about blowing my nose, so it makes me feel better that my trumpet playing is covered up by people flushing the toilet and slamming the door against the wall as hard as they can after not washing their hands.

3/5 Germs.

Third Floor of Adam's Humanities, Stairwell:

I have only visited this bathroom once, but it was definitely a memorable experience. I had just been trusted with watching some girl's stuff, so I was feeling like a really good person, and I was really proud that I was able to successfully navigate Adam's Humanities despite being bad at mazes. This bathroom definitely stands out because it looks like a broom closet from the outside, which really pissed me off when I initially couldn't find it. Unfortunately, this bathroom doesn't have great acoustics, and being able to hear the stairwell door open and close outside is kinda scary.

2/5 Brooms.

Second Floor of the Library, Computer Lab:

I love visiting this bathroom because of its classy academic design. I truly believe that if you placed a giant marble sculpture in the middle of this restroom, absolutely no one would notice or find it offputting. As it's sandwiched between the computer lab and elevators, it offers easy access and you don't have to climb up or down any stairs to reach it, which I appreciate because I hurt my knee (sex injury). This is a pretty solid bathroom with mid acoustics and a fast-paced, enriching, and intelligent environment.

4/5 Books.

First Floor of the Library, Research Section:

I had to visit this bathroom at least ten times in the span of a few hours, so I spent a lot of time flipping between different stalls. I liked how cutesy this bathroom is, though I found it ominous that there are so few mirrors. I appreciated that it was empty most of the times I visited it because I didn't feel bad really letting it rip. I think my one note is that I would've liked the stalls to be stocked with some academic journals to read while I blew my nose— I got a bit bored in there.

2/5 Researches.

First Floor of the Music Building, Indoors:

This one is definitely my least favorite on the list. I always run into people I know, tainting my experience with a sheen of desperation because I'm scared I'm going to be late for class. My major complaint is how small the non-handicap stall is: I almost always dip my skirt in the toilet bowl when I'm trying to close the stall door. The acoustics are also surprisingly shitty considering it's literally the music building. The only praise I can really offer is regarding the ambient sound of brass instruments being played and the fact that this is the only bathroom I've been to on campus that posts the suicide hotline on the door.

1/5 Music Notes.

Who's Making It Out Of Atlanta? Dracula v. The Headless Horseman

TD.B's "It's Dracula"

Are vu ready for your rap lesonz?"
Kendrick Lamar gulps, as Nas breathes heavily.
Kanye West nods nervously. Jay-Z sighs.
"Yes, Dracula," they say in unison.

Is Dracula making it out of Atlanta? You bet your mama, Drain the Cock!

In a new announcement, the infamous Count Dracula of Transylvanian legend has made the XXL Freshman Cypher list 2023. Dracula, now under the pseudonym Count Money, is joining the ranks of rap legends like Chance the Rapper, and Megan thee Stallion.

I know what you're thinking. "The prince of darkness is only just now making it as a freshman rapper?" Count Money has topped the charts in Transylvania for centuries, never outdone. Bar for bar, band for band, FANG FOR FANG FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE, The Count is and stays on top.

His harrowing story was told in "Straight Out of Transylvania." Much like N.W.A, Dracula faced years of discrimination from the crownsguard and village folk for his cursed nature. This turned him into a Vamp With Attitude, not that Drain the Cock could understand such a journey though.

Known for his overseas hits Get your Shriek On, Vampire's Delight, and Fuck Tha Police, Count Money has inspired thousands, like his apprentice Playboy Carti. The Headless Horseman couldn't even inspire his horse. The new XXL Freshman Cypher is only a new chapter in The Counts story, and frankly, we need another white rapper.

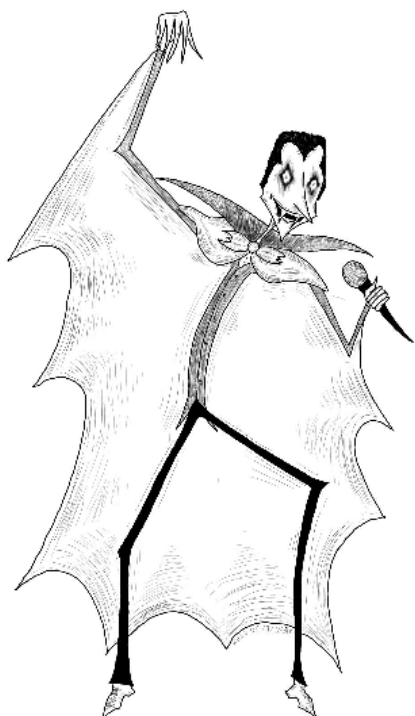

Drain "The Cock" Sockson's "It's The Headless Horseman"

It's obvious what TD.B is going to say. "Dracula's been in the game for so long," "we need another white rapper," and probably "ohhh he's soooo fly" or some shit like that. Band for band don't matter, because bar for bar, HL Horseman is a HEAD.

The Headless Horseman has collabed with the likes of Kendrick, Peggy, and before he went solo, he was the fourth migo. With hits like Ain't No Horse-Steppin', Big Pumpkin', and Fuck Tha Police, it's no wonder why he's making it out of Atlanta before Count Funny does. HL Horseman's villainous nature even influenced the likes of MF DOOM. I mean... where do you think DOOM got his name? My monster is a mercenary for rapping, hustling, and ghouling. He's tactical with his lines, so of corpse TD.B doesn't understand my creature's resolve and tragic backstory.

Just between you and me, word in t-vania is that Dracula is just another Logic clone, and he's working on the corniest new album, Fangtastical. He may talk eloquently, but he'll never suck out the competition. Plus, overall he's just another nepo baby who came from some rich family in the heart of upscale transylvania. If he suck-ceeds it's not gonna be raw talent that got him there, it's gonna be because he drained everyone dry on the way up.

SDSU Premieres Diverse Musical Featuring 14 Different Hate Crimes

Bobby Slayy

This October, SDSU will premiere their first show on the campus's new Main Stage Theatre, Western Sunrise. It's a new and exciting musical by playwright John Smith, directed by Stephen Brotebeck, following the journey of smalltown white homosexual, Ted, as he navigates a strange new world.

Playwright Smith has been working alongside the graduate students of the cast to draft, workshop, and rewrite a piece of work that intimately connects us with a faithful, artistic and upper-middle-class depiction of our modern country.

"I wanted to make sure I had one person of every minority in this show, but not enough to scare away audiences, just like Barbie," comments Smith. "The workshop process was a great deal of fun, even if it was stressful. Two weeks before opening I realized I forgot to put in a disabled character. Luckily, one of the ensemble members is an ADHD, so we didn't have to rewrite again."

Western Sunrise follows a lengthy series of wonderfully diverse shows, including but not limited to: American Postcard Town, Bloodletting, The Weight of Dreams and Cabaret. The SDSU Theatre Department has taken a conscious effort to elevate the voices of the unheard, much to the joy of its students.

"It's hard to want to make art when you've never seen yourself in what you love," laments the production's transgender actress. "But being able to not only feel represented in this play, but also get hate-crimes in the script and on stage, well, it brings several tears to my eyes."

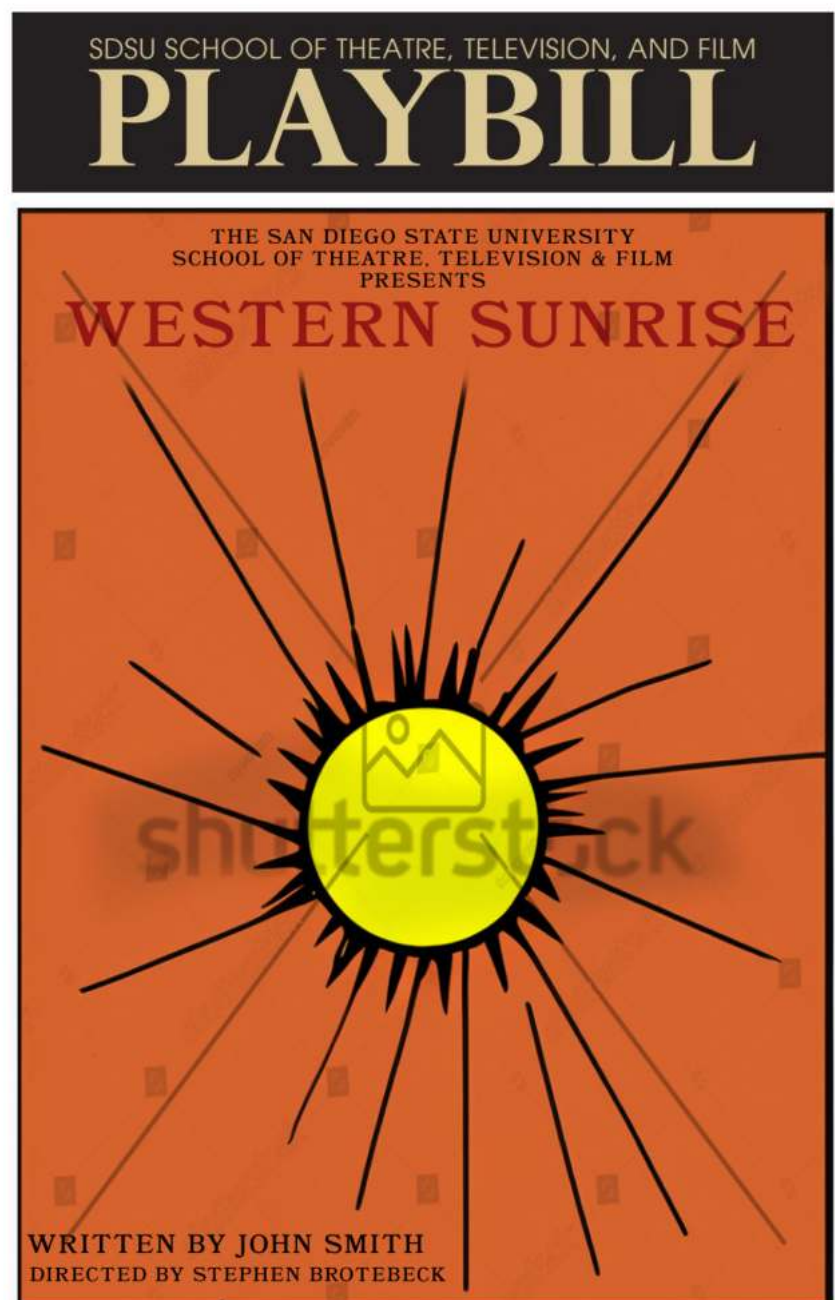

Even beyond finally showing the harrowing and traumatizing lives of people of color on stage, Western Sunrise has provided a safe space for white people.

"This cast is full of such talented people," says Junior theatre student Henry Schwartz, the cis straight white man actor. "Even beyond their incredible voices and performances, spending time with everyone and just joking and workshopping the script together is an experience that will influence my acting and the way I view art forever. It's just a shame I have to scream at them on stage. I really wish I didn't have to be extremely bigoted and unforgivably hateful in every scene I'm in, but, if that's the only way to ever accurately promote diversity, I'll do it."

While of course, Schwartz's character is forgiven at the end of the show after a long conversation about gender ideology, it's still vital and important we see how Queer people and POCs are bullied and physically abused, and furthermore, how racism and systemic issues can be resolved through kissing, gaining magical powers and smiling at each other.

While there has been a small amount of criticism from past cynics of SDSU's shows, worrying that the physical violence on stage follows an ugly pattern including: bricks being thrown at a gay man in The Weight of Dreams, a gay baby being almost drowned in Bloodletting, and brutal, electroshock conversion therapy in Ziggy Stardust and Me, it should be noted that Western Sunrise contains no such harm towards gays, aside from when the main character's cousin, who, with no prior buildup, calls him a faggot.

Tickets are on sale at tff.sdsu.edu for students at $17, or $20 for the general public. And yes, if your theatre class requires you to attend you must pay as well. Additionally, look forward to seeing SDSU's next musical this November, Children of Eden, a pop-opera retelling of The Old Testament.

THE RUMOR COME OUT: Does Christian Evangelist Is Ghost?

Chlamillion Dollar BJ

There has been a rumor spreading around campus this October that San Diego State University is haunted by a malignant spirit. Word of mouth tales have been passed around of a ghoulish force that has been pestering students on their way to classes, shouting horrifying messages at them and even making them fear for their very souls. Could this just be a tall tale spread around for the Halloween season? Maybe.

But unlike the spineless cowards at the Daily Aztec, this reporter isn't afraid to track down a scary story. After all, aside from my gold medal cunnilingus and silver medal bocce ball playing, ghost hunting is what I'm best at! So, after gearing up my state of the art paranormal tracking technology (ghost sensor and big net), I decided to go undercover and see what I could find.

Most of the rumors directed me toward the quad area between the student center and bookstore, so this was where I staked out my claim. First, I went over to the SDSU Well-Being and Health Promotion booth, decorated with a sign that implored me to, "Pumpkin Spice It Up In the Bedroom." No, thank you! This is serious business! I waved my wand around to see if it detected any paranormal activity, but this just encouraged the ugly polycule running the booth to roll a bright orange condom onto my admittedly phallic looking sensor. I stormed off in frustration and they all patted me on the butt as I went.

Next, I spotted a booth full of people dressed in white sheets shouting unspeakable things at passersby and thought I must have found my mark! But after running up and tackling one of them I realized they were fully corporeal. In fact, it was just the SDSU student branch of TurningPointUSA, handing out flyers for a big bonfire they had going on that night. I snatched one out of their hands, ripped it up, and told them I didn't have time for their valor-stealing-fake-ghost antics! I had work to do! Then I popped one right in the eye, oh yeah, I did.

I was close to giving up, when suddenly my sensor started to pick up a faint reading. I followed it like a dog following the scent of a traditional Halloween turkey... and that's when I saw him. It was one of those guys! You know the ones. The guys that try to hand you Bible literature that tells you how to get to heaven. The ones that hang out around Pride holding signs and tell you that you're gonna go to Hell if you don't accept Jesus into your brain or heart or whatever (I never listen). Those guys. I had never thought much of him before, but now I took a closer look. His paleness was not simply caucasian but phosphorescent. His Salvation Army clothes were tattered and floated as though drafted by a ghastly wind. And also he was wearing big-ass chains around his waist and wrists. Guess I never noticed. `_(:/)_/'

I tried catching him with my net, but he just phased right through! Drat! He spoke to me in a voice like grinding metal, "Ah child! You see me for what I truly am! Hark and hear my plea! In life I was a scoundrel. I cheated, I lied, I even littered. Pretty bad, I know. For this, I have been cursed to walk these hallowed school halls until I have saved the immortal soul of just one student. Please child, day by day I am ignored by thousands of students. Won't you just take one of my pamphlets so that I may pass on to Eternal Paradise?" What would I do? What COULD I do? I thought his words over for a moment before realizing this was the only way to get rid of this freak. So I took the pamphlet, emblazoned on the front with the words "CHRIST OR NAH?"

Joy flashed across his face as his chains dissolved into heavenly light. However, that bliss quickly contorted to despair as a sanguine portal began opening up at his feet. Cries of anguish escaped his lips as demonic hands dragged him into the dreaded pits of Tartarus. It seemed his eternity was not to be spent in Heaven, but in HELL. He must've littered pretty bad, huh?

So, remember friends, as we continue into the spookiest month of the year: don't be frightened by evangelists threatening your immortal soul if you don't take their papers. The truth is, they should be a lot more scared of you than you are of them.

There are no "Peeping Toms"

Drain "The Cock" Sockson

We at the Koala care for others, and we hate to make anybody feel uncomfortable, gross, or even uncomfortably gross. Which is why I have to address something that has been gaining traction in the news recently. There have been reports of a rise in "peeping Toms" around the SDSU area. Concerned mothers have been calling in about what they're describing as rampant voyeurs, sneaking into their daughters' backyards just to look through their windows. San Diego seems awfully worried about these peeping Toms' true intentions, and wants to take action against these unwanted creepers.

Seeing this story for the first time, I felt as though I had to comment on this and clear the air. These "peeping Toms" that people have been seeing are actually... me. Every single one of them is me, BUT LET ME EXPLAIN MYSELF. I am not getting any sexual gratification out of what I am doing, let alone am I trying to hurt anyone. All I wanted to do is go into the backyards of young women in order to CHECK ON THEM. NOTHING SEXUAL!! I JUST CHECKED ON THEM so that I could make sure everything is okay. I have even been in a couple boys' backyards too (the ones that seem weak and defenseless). Seeing videos of me online really weirded me out, and I want all of you guys to turn off your backyard cameras and motion sensor lights so that I can properly check on all of you (the lights scare me :3).

You people have been contacting the city, the local authorities, and the news, which is very overwhelming for me, because I don't fuck with cops. You guys even contacted SDSU themselves in hopes that they could issue a couple statements. Luckily, SDSU understands the good that I am doing, because when the news outlets and the concerned mothers reached out to them, they said that there was nothing they could do and it was out of their hands. Essentially, they didn't want to deal with it NOT BECAUSE THEY WERE LAZY OR INCONSIDERATE, but because they knew I was out there being a hero.

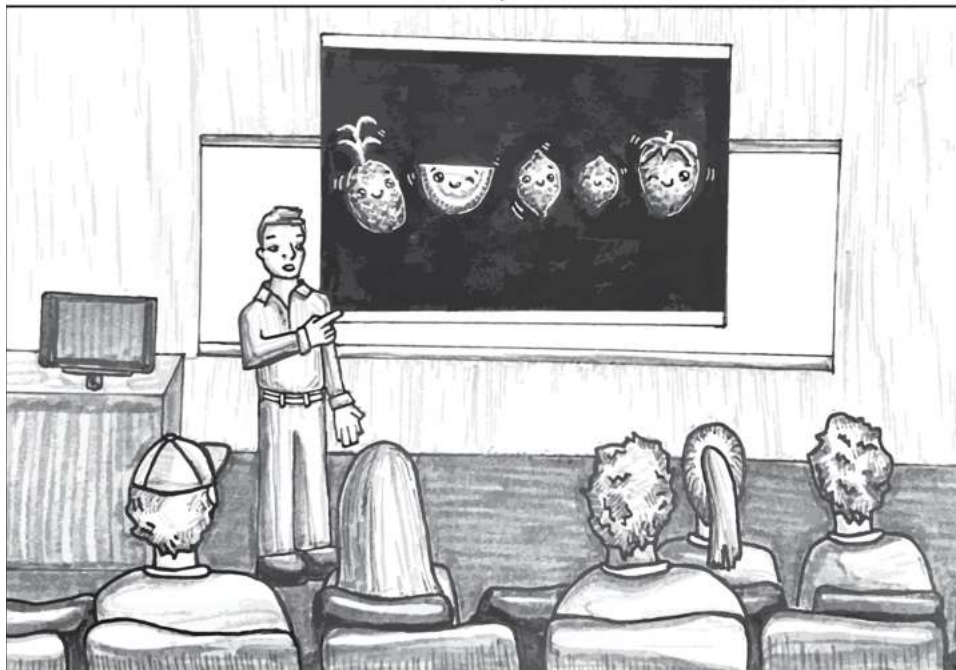

What if something happened to your precious daughters and weak sons and I wasn't there to see it???? (i don't check on nonbinary people because they're strong.) WHAT IF THERE WAS A REAL PEEPING TOM??? Without me, there could actually be a real rise in those freaks, looking through everybody's windows. Thankfully, that isn't the case!! What I didn't mention is... and I hate to admit this to our millions of koala readers, is that I have a magical ability. I can see breast cancer, and when I look at your daughters' beautiful bountiful racks, I can notify them if and when the cancer manifests, and... (again I hate to admit this) when I stroke my dick- I can cure it.

Breast cancer is a serious issue, and if you could use a second of your time to donate to the Breast Cancer Research Foundation (BCRF), it would be greatly appreciated. I wanna be out there on the streets less. I don't want to do this anymore, but I have to.

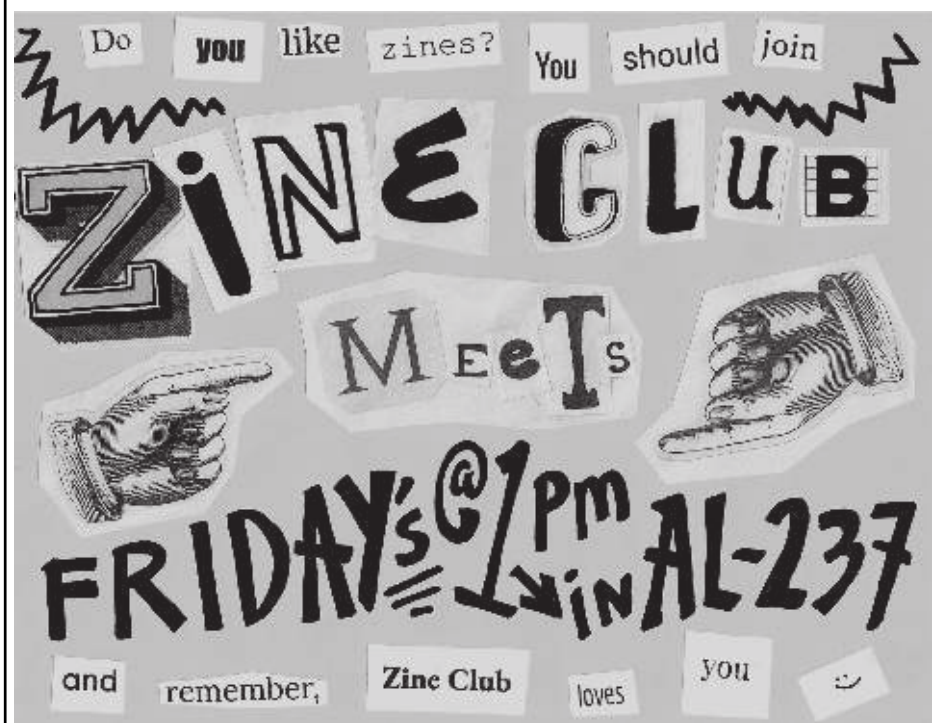

And all I'm saying is that if you guys keep pushing this fake narrative about "potential voyeurs," then I just might stop checking in on you guys. OKAY???

Professor Wallabeanie, Author of Textbook

ALPHA CHI OMUMMY

Recruit #13114234445234

ATTENTION, SDSU STUDENTS!!
Do not worry if you see a mummy around campus! We've noticed it, and we're sure you have too, but there is no funny business going on campus, no sir. It is not a costume, nor a loser with a weird kink, but a fun third thing!

It has been revealed that the so-called mummy seen around campus is actually a sophomore Alpha Chi Omega active that has undergone an obscene amount of plastic surgery. The sorority claims it had nothing to do with the sisterhood retreat to the washing machine they organized, but we're not so sure.

"It's for the best," offered a junior executive who wishes to remain anonymous, "she went from an SDSU 8 to an SDSU 10... it was the least she could do for us after we gave her a bid."

We interviewed the AXO mummy, but her words were too muffled by the bandages. Her Big was able to translate for us: "I really want to be SAE's sweetheart next year!"

So, do not worry, reader. Everything is totally, completely fine at the AXO house and you shouldn't be afraid if you see the mummy around campus. We should all do our best to support her during this difficult time!

the girls down my hall have opened my eyes so much like who knew mormons were so violent haha

I always put the treadmill at high speed just so that no one can hear me fart.

hey everyone I'm from a UCSD and got a copy of your paper. It's pretty cool unlike our school paper.

my boyfriend has sticky balls

eating ass will change your life

Lost my virginity to a Grindr hookup and he dislocated my hip :(

I would join the SDSU Marxists, but the on-campus Chipotle employees infuriate me so much that I just can't stand on the side of the workers.

i need a hiding spot for my uncleaned pink vibrating butt plug "buzzy butt" in my dorm room

i keep having daydreams where i'm having sex with an aztec in traditional clothing (i am a man and he is a man)

all i want in life is to own white slaves

Here's some word of wisdom from a UCI student about flat girls. "The smaller she is, the closer you are to her heart when you hug her."

my hot professor holds eye contact so intensely and i blush and giggle to myself every time i might as well squeal

My green flag is I be putting my hands in my pockets just to get a good pussy itch

paul dano is so fucking hot

The only reason I ever pick up the koala is because the people that hand it out are beautiful.

She called me a chismoso and now it's all I want to hear. I mean after the tea.

Don't get it twisted. Good drama over vagina any day. Except Wednesdays. Focus on your school work no drama or vagina on Wednesday

Being an older transfer student and seeing the hot and dumb unaccessible young frat boys is just painful.

Woke up on my bathroom floor after getting home from the Improv clubs show. 10/10 performance would recommend

i swiffered piss off the floor of a frat boys dorm room last year after he got too drunk, pulled his dick out and thoroughly soaked his polisci102 textbook. he wasn't even that cute i was just desperate

I hate when the walls start bleeding in the storm hall men's room

one time I found the Facebook of the guy who was having an affair with me and I saw he told his wife something I came up with and I threw up and had a migraine for 3 days when I do the coochie machine at the arc
